

ACAMS Partners with Case Western Reserve University School of Law for Master's Degree Program in Financial Integrity

MIAMI, Fla., February 11, 2016 – The Association of Certified Anti-Money Laundering Specialists (ACAMS) announces today its academic partnership with Case Western Reserve University's Law School to teach in the 16-month Executive Master of Arts in Financial Integrity (MAFI) program.

The executive program is designed for students with at least three years of experience in the financial integrity practice or related field. The courses are team taught by academics and senior government experts, the private sector and international organizations. ACAMS Executive Vice President, John Byrne, CAMS, will also serve as an adjunct professor for the program and ACAMS will provide continuing education credits to CAMS-certified members who complete the program.

"Over the last several years, ACAMS has made a commitment to help further the academic pursuit of anti-money laundering and financial crime prevention education. Through partnerships with various prestigious universities such as Case Western, we have been able to further our mission of ensuring the development of essential professionals in AML to ensure the safety and soundness of the financial system," commented Byrne.

The partnership with Case Western Reserve University is the fourth academic partnership the association has established. ACAMS has partnered for both undergraduate and graduate degree programs in the area of financial crime detection and prevention with Utica College and the University of South Florida in the United States, and Charles Sturt University in Australia.

###

About the Association of Certified Anti-Money Laundering Specialists[®] (ACAMS[®])

ACAMS is the largest international membership organization dedicated to enhancing the knowledge and skills of AML and financial crime prevention professionals from a wide range of industries, firms and agencies with extensive resources designed to develop and sharpen the skills required for superior job performance and career advancement. The CAMS certification is the most widely recognized AML certification among compliance professionals worldwide. Visit www.acams.org for more information.